MAY/JUNE ISSUE 2013

Klamath Tribes Historic Treaty Right Water Call

Chiloquin, OR- On June 10, 2013, the Klamath Tribes delivered to the Oregon Water Resources Department a “call” requesting that the Department take action to enforce the Tribes’ water rights that have been determined in the Klamath Basin Adjudication. A “call” is a request that the Department’s Water master reduce illegal water uses and water uses whose priority date is junior to the calling party, until enough water becomes available to meet the party’s rights. Other calls are also expected from Irrigation Districts and others with senior water rights. These are the first such “calls” of their type in the Klamath Basin because prior to the Department’s recent order in the Adjudication determining the pre-1909 and federal and tribal rights in the Basin, OWRD did not have a basis to enforce for or against junior or senior water rights.

The Klamath Tribes’ rights are based on the needs of plant, wildlife, and fish species the Tribes reserved the right to harvest in the Treaty of 1864, including fish in several rivers, lakes and marshes of the Upper Klamath Basin. The Tribes’ water rights have been affirmed in the courts to have a “time immemorial” priority date, and are the most senior in the Basin. The rights provide that specific quantities of water are to be maintained instream to provide for fisheries and other treaty resources. Because the stream flows are currently lower than the Tribes’ rights, the Tribes have asked for illegal uses and junior uses to be restricted until the flows are met.

Klamath Tribes Chairman Don Gentry explained, “Our water rights are essential to the protection of our Treaty resources. I think everyone knows the Tribes are committed to protecting our Treaty fisheries, and this is an important step in that direction. These are not rights granted to the Tribes by the state or the federal government; they are rights our ancestors reserved in the Treaty of 1864.”

The tribal water rights have been in litigation in the Adjudication since it began in 1975.

Most people in the Basin have long known that the Tribes' senior water rights would one day be enforced, and there would be a transition from unregulated water use. Gentry observed, "Everyone has known this day was coming. It is unfortunate that more people did not join in our cooperative effort to resolve water issues without litigation and calls, but that was their choice. Currently this is the only path available to us to protect our resources."

Water use in the Basin has not been closely monitored or measured in the past, so it is difficult to say specifically what the impacts of the call will be. But it seems safe to predict that enforcement of the Tribes' rights will bring changes to Basin water management.

The call is partly due to the shortage of water resulting from the drought plaguing the Basin this year. The water supply is well below normal. Will Hatcher, Director of the Klamath Tribes Natural Resource Department and member of the of the Tribes' Negotiating Team observed, "A drought emergency has been officially declared, and that provides some flexibility. But in the end, the Water master is required to allocate water according to the priority-date system."

How long the call will remain in effect is difficult to predict because there has never been a call of this type in the Basin before. Also, the result depends in part on the weather and duration of the drought.

A Note from the Tribal Council to Klamath Tribal Members Regarding Current Water Issues

Since the Klamath Tribes and Klamath Project irrigators have made a call for enforcement of water rights, there has been increasing tension in the Klamath Basin Community. These calls for water rights enforcement, in combination with severe drought conditions, have shut off irrigated agriculture above and around Klamath and Agency Lakes. Understandably, this is a very serious issue affecting our entire Klamath Basin community, and has raised tensions between some members of the off-Project agricultural community and their supporters, with Klamath Project irrigators and the Klamath Tribes. It is disheartening, however, though the Klamath Project irrigators have has also made a call, there is a disproportionate focus on the Klamath Tribes. This is evident by increasing derogatory and racially charged comments expressed in our local community, on computer websites, and in other public forums.

There has also been a reported increase to confrontations centered around the current water issues between individual members of the non-Native community and Klamath tribal members. Because of this, we encourage you to avoid engaging in potential threatening confrontations, and that you file a report on any incidents of harassment, intimidation, and threats or acts of violence with local enforcement authorities. It is important to report any relevant information you may have, including the names of those present, descriptions of individuals and vehicles, date, time, location, and description of incident that occurred. If you have questions, or need assistance filing a report, please contact someone the Tribal Council for assistance.

Klamath Falls, Oregon

Klamath Falls- June 12, 2013, marked another monumental and historic event regarding the Klamath Tribes Water Adjudication, with the Honorable Judge Cameron F. Wogan presiding.

The conference, which won't be finished until next year- 2014, started with a welcome and court introduction, then moved to an overview of procedures and protocol, and into discussions and procedure recommendations on: Case Management; Oregon Water Resource Department compilation and website information; Service Issues and current service list; Form of exceptions and proceedings; Telephonic hearings and appearances; Comments regarding initial hearing; Limits or not on briefing; Substitution parties; and other topics that may apply. This conference is to discuss case management issues and the court will use this input to make future case management decisions.

Klamath Tribal Chairman Don Gentry was in attendance along with Council members, Kathy Hill, Anna Bennett, and Taylor Tupper. Tribal Water Attorney, Carl "Bud" Ullman represented the tribes at the hearing, and Water Team Representative, Jeff Mitchell, also attended on the tribes behalf.

June 12th marked day one of the conference, the hearings will continue thru 2013- into-2014. Updates and information will be provided to the membership via the Water Team , Tribal Government, the newsletter and website: www.klamathtribes.org (Water Rights Update section).

Klamath Tribal Water Attorney, Carl Ullman (far left), takes notes and has represented the Klamath People for over 25 years protecting Treaty Resources.

Government to Government Relations Fremont/Winema National Forest and Klamath Tribes

On June 12, 2013, Klamath Tribal Council Members, Don Gentry and Taylor Tupper, attended, on behalf of the Klamath Tribes, a new employee orientation and Forest Leadership team meeting at the Chiloquin Ranger District. Chairman Gentry graciously shared a presentation regarding the Tribes-Forest relationship, tribal history and current priorities with Forest employees and staff.

Some of new employees were District Rangers, Staff and program managers. Following the presentation, the Forest Service prepared a huge potluck BBQ, and visiting with old and new friends was the final business of the day.

NCAI OPENING CEREMONIES

In late June, 2013, Klamath Tribal Council Members, Chairman, Don Gentry; Vice-Chairwoman Vivian Kimbol; Secretary Torina Case; and Council Members Taylor R. Tupper and RoseMary Treetop all traveled to Reno, Nevada, for the Mid-Year National Congress of American Indians (NCAI) Conference. Founded in 1944 the NCAI is the oldest, largest, and most representative American Indian and Alaska Native organization serving the broad interests of tribal governments and communities.

NCAI is organized as a representative congress of American Indians and Alaska Natives the serves to develop consensus on national priority issues that impact tribal sovereignty. Tribal Governments pass resolutions to become members of NCAI, each tribe selecting official delegates to represent their nations. Each tribe comes to vote on important issues facing Indian Country, promote their tribe, and meet new and old friends for tribal business and progression. NCAI is known as the Unified Voice of Indian Country.

Renewable Energy was one of the priorities at this event, and Chairman Gentry and Council Member Tupper had the privilege of attending a private meeting with Pilar Thomas of the Department of Energy. The meeting was arranged by Councilman Shawn Jackson, who was unable to attend, but who's been instrumental in the Energy Team. The Klamath Tribes will now, due to these efforts, host a representative from the Department of Energy who will assist the Tribe in developing a Renewable Energy Strategic Plan. As the Team Leader, Councilman Jackson and several others within the Klamath Tribes, will assist in this effort. Other sessions attended by the Council included, Economic Development, Cultural Protection, Wind Energy, Health Care, Budgets, Indian Gaming, Technology, Education, and Natural Resources, just to name a few. Tribal delegates will continue to have a presence at NCAI and promote the Klamath Tribes and our vision for the future.

For more information please feel free to contact Tribal Council members Gentry, Kimbol, Case, Tupper, or Treetop. Each attended different sessions and made connections for the tribe.

Chairman Don Gentry, Indian Health Service Director, Dr. Yvette Rubidoux, and Tribal Council Member Taylor R. Tupper, had a moment to visit, meet, and discuss her presentation on Indian Health.

Chairman Gentry pictured here with Klamath Indian, Mark Cruz, who also attended NCAI and will be working in D.C. soon on the Hill.

Klamath Indian, and Klamath Union Graduate, Mark Cruz, will soon be a legislative fellow starting July 29th for Congressman Tom Cole who is an enrolled Chickasaw Tribal Member from Oklahoma. (Cole/Cruz pictured left).

Cruz received his Bachelors in Science from Pepperdine University in 2010. Then taught on the Rosebud Reservation for two years. He finished his Masters Degree in Urban Education Policies from Brown University in May 2013. He is the son of Leta Unive and the grandson of the late Poncho and Bunny Unive.

Education & Employment Update

Class of 2014:

The announcements for scholarships will be coming out soon, in particular, the Gates Millennium Scholarship. The Gates scholarship will fund your unmet need for any college or university that you want to attend. If you are in the right field it will take you all the way to a Doctorate. A student must be an enrolled tribal member or descendant to be eligible to apply and have a GPA of 3.33. The Gates Scholarship will open August 1 and can be accessed at the American Indian Graduate Center website. This scholarship is lengthy so get a jump start on it now. If you have questions about this scholarship you may contact either Coquise Wilson at (800) 524-9787 extension 133 or Brenda Frank at extension 109.

College/ University Students:

The Klamath Tribes Education & Employment Department is offering to Klamath Tribes members two scholarships on top of the current tribal scholarship.

1. Oregon Community Fund. If you are a student enrolled in a vocational program there is a one-time scholarship available to first year students. The application is a one pager. It will require the completion of the application, a letter, and Klamath Tribal verification. To apply or ask questions call or email Coquise Wilson at (800) 524-1787 extension 133 or coquise.wilson@klamathtribes.com.

2. Natural Resource Science Scholarship. If you are a declared Natural or Environmental Science field there is a scholarship available. You must be an enrolled Klamath Tribes member and must have a cumulative GPA of 2.0. The application is a one page. It will require the completion of the application, a letter, current official transcript indicating cumulative GPA and declared major, also the Klamath Tribal verification form. If you have a Klamath Tribes scholarship application on file for the academic year 2013-14 please contact the Department. To apply or ask questions call or email Coquise Wilson at (800) 524-1787 extension 133 or coquise.wilson@klamathtribes.com

Family Day- Friday, August 16th, 2013

An attention family with students in public schools the JOM Coordinator, Alethea Barlowe, has announced the day for the Annual Family Day, which is Friday, August 16th. The plan is a day trip to Lake of the Woods. More information will be following this announcement. Keep an eye open for the fliers.

Become a Foster Parent Today!

With great sadness, the tribes have elected to discontinue overseeing the Five Directions Youth Residential Treatment Center (formerly known as Klamath Youth Residential Treatment Center/WEMBLE). We wanted to provide our tribal membership with factual information as to why we arrived at the decision to return the program. For the past two years, we have negotiated with Indian Health Services for increased funding; however, we have been unsuccessful at this endeavor. Recently, we received official notification from Indian Health Services informing the Tribes that additional funds are not available, also with the recent sequester (federal funding - automatic budget cuts) we have lost even more program support funds. In addition to funding issues, the current facility we occupy will no longer be available as of December 31, 2013. Unfortunately, with USDA requirements the Klamath Tribes are not in a position to purchase a new facility. The residential program will be officially closing August 22, 2013; this is of course a sad day for the Tribes as we recognize this program is greatly needed. If you have any questions, please contact Gail Hatcher 541-882-1487 or Shawna Gallagher 541-882-1487.

Welcome NASA students to the Klamath Tribes

Recently, students from the lower Klamath River Tribes, Florida, and as far away as London, visited the Klamath Tribes as part of a far-reaching, innovative educational research program undertaken by NASA, in collaboration with Tribal Governments and Federal Natural Resource Agencies.

The program provides an unparalleled experience in developing high-potential tribal college students to become leaders in uniting science, technology, engineering, mathematics with Earth observations and natural resource conservation.

The program is an intensive, ten-week, world-class interdisciplinary research program offered to a select group of 6 tribal college students under the guidance of NASA Ames Research Center and partner science advisors from federal natural resource agencies.

The program is an opportunity to perform meaningful research under the guidance of mentors who are accomplished professional research staff. The selected tribal student will not be an employee of NASA, but an independent researcher working in collaboration with NASA.

Two weeks of the program will be spent at NASA Ames Research Center, Mountain View, California working in a team environment, designing and executing collaborative research projects. Eight weeks will be spent in the field. Students were hosted by the Klamath Tribes in late June and spent time at the Natural Resource Research Water Station, Tribal Administration, and with the tribes water biologist.

The program is more than a research internship. At its heart are the participants (college students), mentors (science professionals), and tribal leaders who are deeply committed to each other's success in using science to research and protect our natural resource for future generations.
